Call for Submissions

The Revisioner: Beyond the Written Word
Spring 2012

The University Writing Center’s publication needs your texts!

Every semester, the University Writing Center produces a newsletter as a part of our mission to foster a community of writing. We wish to collect a wide sample of the writing that takes place within our writing center, as well as in the broader ASU community. If you are developing or have finished a text that you would like to share with the campus, consider submitting your work for The ReVisioner’s “Beyond the Written Word” issue.

For our 2012 spring issue, we are seeking not only written texts, but also oral and visual texts. Every day we encounter different rhetorical forms, and we wish to celebrate all these forms in our upcoming issue. Consequently, we will be venturing beyond the written word and into a world where all kinds of texts can be shared and enjoyed.

Please also include a brief reflection on your writing experience (along with your submission) that considers how the form of your text impacted your creative process and final product. Writers should limit their submission to 1000 words or five minutes.

To submit your text, please email writingctr@appstate.edu.

Submission Deadline:
Friday, March 9, 2012
5 PM

Possible Submission Topics:

- Experiences from writing sessions as client or consultant
- Stories and reflections on the impact of state budget cuts
- Trends in writing assignments, activities, or theories
- Writing across the curriculum
- Writing in the discipline
- Thoughts on grammar
- Writing hints
- Common writing challenges and solutions
- Publishing opportunities